

For Immediate Release

Evening Post Books Releases “Love Is Two People Talking”

CHARLESTON, S.C. — FEBRUARY 22, 2012 — Evening Post Books, a division of Evening Post Publishing Company announces the March 9, 2012 publication of “Love Is Two People Talking,” a novel by Charles H. Banov, M.D.

“Love Is Two People Talking” is a heartwarming story about the importance of communication between family and friends. It examines a myriad of emotional issues including old age, alienation, physical illness, suicide and one’s relationship with the Creator. The story is loosely based on Dr. Banov’s personal experiences living with Parkinson’s Disease and his relationship with his daughter who has Rett Syndrome, a type of developmental disease.

The official release party for “Love Is Two People Talking” will be held on Sunday, March 11, 2012 from 2-4 p.m. at the Charleston County Disabilities Board, 995 Morrison Drive, Charleston. Admission is free and refreshments will be served. Books will be on sale and Dr. Banov will be available to sign.

Charles H. Banov, M.D. is a native of Charleston, S.C. He was a Clinical Professor of Medicine at the Medical University of South Carolina and practiced allergy and immunology in Charleston from 1961 until his retirement in 2007. Dr. Banov has been involved in many civic and medical organizations and his memoir, “Office Upstairs, A Doctor’s Journey” was published in 2007. “Love Is Two People Talking” is his first novel.

For $17.95, “Love Is Two People Talking” will be available March 9 online at www.EveningPostBooks.com, inside the Post-Courier building at 134 Columbus St. in Charleston and in local bookstores. Bulk sales are available upon request by contacting Evening Post Books at 843.958.7367.

ISBN #: 978-0-9834457-5-3

About Evening Post Books:

Evening Post Books, a division of Evening Post Publishing Company, began publishing in 2008 and features authors and books of the South Carolina Lowcountry.