About the RettNet

The RettNet is a moderated email list serve forum for all interested persons who wish to talk openly and honestly with others about the many facets of Rett syndrome. Open discussion may draw a wide variety of opinions and ideas in any subject area. We request that all discussions and comments remain respectful and focused on Rett-related topics. This exchange of ideas is welcome. We do not, however, as an organization, support or endorse any particular treatment, medication or therapy. We encourage parents to support one another with suggestions and to contact their child's physician for final approval.

There is no charge to subscribers for using the service. However, the IRSF depends on your support and encourages your partnership so we can continue to offer services such as these to the Rett syndrome community.

To subscribe, please complete these fields:

Note: You will receive an email notification confirming your Rettnet listserve subscription within 1-2 days of signing up. Please know that email volume averages 25 messages per day, with a system maximum of 75 messages in one day. To help manage this energetic listserv volume, we recommend members setup "autodirect" of messages with "rettnet" in the subject line to a subfolder or create a separate email account for Rettnet. There is also an option to set your subscription to "Digest" mode so you will receive one summary email of all the days' messages.

For more Rettnet commands such as unsubscribe or to stop mail temporarily, refer to these rules.
