Are you a parent or caregiver to someone with Rett syndrome?

- What are your experiences of communication services?
- What support for communication do you receive?
- What are the communication goals you are working towards with your child?
- What works for you?
- What could help you more?

You can answer all of these questions and more in our survey for families.

International Communication Guidelines Project

We need YOU!

Have your say during Rett Syndrome Awareness Month and contribute to the project

To develop international clinical guidelines for communication we need input from everyone affected by Rett syndrome - individuals and families living with Rett syndrome on a daily basis and professionals who support them. By working together and listening to everyone’s experiences we hope that communication services for all individuals with Rett syndrome will be improved.

It is important that as many people from as many countries as possible contribute their experiences. We can’t do it without you.

Thank you for your help and support.

The clinical guidelines for communication research team:
Gill Townend, Theresa Bartolotta, Sally-Ann Garrett, Anna Urbanowicz, Helena Wandin and Leopold Curfs.

If you have any questions about the project, contact: g.townend@maastrichtuniversity.nl

Are you a communication professional working with individuals and families affected by Rett syndrome?

- What services and support do you offer?
- What communication goals do you set?
- How do you build your knowledge and develop your skills in relation to Rett syndrome?
- Where do you find good clinical practice information?
- What could help you more?

You can answer all of these questions and more in our survey for communication professionals.

Follow this link to find out more about the survey: https://maastrichtuniversity.eu.qualtrics.com/SE/?SID=SV_eycPwvMsE0Wn4XP

The deadline for responding to this survey has been extended during Rett Syndrome Awareness Month but must close on 31st October 2016. Please contribute now.

N.B. This survey is available in English only.

We welcome input from communication professionals with all levels of experience, from those who work with only one person with Rett syndrome to those who have service level responsibility for many.
